An update from the Department of Natural Resources

BY MATT PICHE

Department of Natural Resources –
Natural Resources Coordinator
matt.piche@eyak-nsn.gov

This spring marked the 21st year of NVE's Copper River Chinook Salmon Monitoring Program. In 2021 we continue the annual fishwheel mark-recapture study to estimate the inriver abundance of adult Chinook salmon passing through Baird Canyon on the lower Copper River. The data produced by this study is used to help manage sustainable fisheries and maintain a healthy Chinook salmon population. The Alaska Department of Fish and Game and the National Park Service estimate harvest in all Chinook salmon fisheries on the Copper River, this harvest data is combined with NVE's population data to monitor total returning run size, system-wide escapement, assess the annual sustainable escapement goal, and calculate the preseason run forecast.

Additionally, this is the third and final year of a Copper River Chinook salmon radio-telemetry study conducted by NVE and ADF&G Division of Sport Fish. NVE tags a proportion of the salmon run passing through Baird Canyon and a series of radio towers on the Upper Copper River mainstem and within the six major drainages log individual Chinook salmon as they pass by. In addition, over 50 hours of aerial surveys are conducted each year over all drainages to locate tagged Chinook salmon on spawning grounds and fish in route between tower locations. This study provides distribution (i.e. what percentage of Chinook salmon spawn in each tributary) and stock specific run timing (i.e. when each stock passes through Baird Canyon, past each tower location, and arrives at their spawning grounds).

NVE is also using the fishwheel sampling platform to assist other researchers with their studies. This is the 5th year NVE has assisted the Alaska Department of Fish and Game Division of Sport Fish with adult recovery of coded wire tagged Chinook salmon as part of the first inriver and ocean survival study on Copper River salmon. NVE is also assisting the Prince William Sound Science Center with a Sockeye salmon energetics study to investigate the impact of body size on migratory success and monitor the prevalence of pathogens.

Lastly, this summer will be year one of a four-year feasibility study on the Klutina River (tributary of the Copper River) to monitor the abundance of Sockeye and Chinook salmon. NVE will be using the same equipment and similar techniques in use at the ADF&G Miles Lake Sonar station. If the sonar feasibility study is successful, we hope it will provide the foundation for further in-depth studies on food web productivity, juvenile and ocean survival, water chemistry, and modelling the future of Copper River salmon populations on a glacially dominated lake system. NVE and Ahtna Intertribal Resource Commission will locate a suitable sonar site along the Klutina River in 2021 with full season sonar operation anticipated to begin in spring of 2022.

If you would like to learn more about NVE's salmon monitoring programs, please reach out to the Department of the Environment and Natural Resources. ■

Traditional skills

Skin sewing with Gloria Cunningham

A beginning skin sewing class was taught by Gloria Cunningham in April. Students provided their own fabric and pre-stretched animal hide. Gloria then showed students the proper way to cut the hide and complete a 12x12 inch pillow.

Hides are available for purchase at ICC to consortium members. Non-native students may not work with sea otter but there are a variety of other animals available to them, like land otter or beaver.

Get notices on more upcoming class opportunities like these by becoming a member of Ilanka Cultural Center at www.ilankaculturalcenter.com.

How to a stretch hide

You will need:

- Plywood board, at least the size of the hide
- Staple gun
- Spray bottle filled with water, or leather conditioning spray
- Animal hide: see otter, beaver, land otter (non-native students may not use sea otter)

Instructions:

1. Lay hide down on plywood stretcher board.
2. Spray the skin of the hide until soaked with water or leather conditioning spray.
3. Get the staple gun. Start at the head of the animal. Staple to hide on the edge of the skin a couple times, about one half-inch from the edge.
4. Moved to the tail end of the hide. Pull the hide tight, staple a couple times.
5. Go to the left or right side of the hide. Pull tight and staple. Repeat the steps, moving across from the last stable, moving in a circle. It is helpful to have a friend for this part to help stretch the hide, hold the board, and staple.
6. Leave hide on the stretcher board overnight.
7. Remove staples.

Danaya.Hoover@eyak-nsn.gov

Ilanka Cultural Center is planning for 2021 Cultural Week which will take place at Mt. Eccles Elementary September 27-30. This is a week-long event where culture, language, dance, stories, crafts, and food are shared with Cordova's children. This is a unique and very special opportunity to pass on traditional ways, skills, and knowledge with the youth. Each day, the kids rotate around to different lessons and teachers, and participate in fun and educational projects and activities. We are looking for volunteers to help aid in classes, help cook for the potlatch on the last day, and clean up. Any High School students who participate can earn community hours. If you are interested in participating in this year's event, please contact Danaya Hoover by email danaya.hoover@eyak-nsn.com or call 907-424-7903.

Elder Services update

New activities for Elders

BY JACKIE LADD

Elder Services Coordinator
Jackie.Ladd@eyak-nsn.gov

Elder sewing circle

It is time to get some programs started back up after a long time of social distancing. The NVE Elders sewing circle will take place from 1:30-3 p.m. every Tuesday of the month. We will be meeting in the NVE upstairs boardroom. Bring a project to work on and some good conversation to share.

Out and About Elder rides

Are you looking forward to a ride out the road to see wildlife, visit with friends or maybe watch someone fishing at the cove? Then call the Elder Program new phone number (907-253-7230) and sign up. The Elder Program will offer this service weekly to Elders every Thursday from 2-4 p.m. We will be using the new Ilanka clinic van for our rides.

Toss Barnes and Skye Steritz at Elder Distribution.

Bruce Campbell, Rachel Hoover and Skye Steritz at Elder Distribution.

Elder Distribution

The Elder Program started doing distribution last year when the main NVE office closed its doors due to COVID.

The funding was made possible by receiving grants under the Older American Title VI program. The Elder Program organized monthly food distribution with the thought of planning nutritional meals, healthy activities and offering safety supplies to Tribal Elders. The wind, the snow and the sideways rain did not stop our distributions.

We were later joined with the Native Conservancy who is providing Elders with additional subsistence food. This always brings a smile to an Elders face and up lifting support to very special people, our Elders.

With restrictions being lifted and more in person gatherings we are hoping to start mug ups again soon. You ask what is a mug-up, it is a free lunch time meal for NVE Elders to gathering with friends. It is also an opportunity to share information about community programs and events.

Keep an eye out for Tribal Family Services new location in the Pioneer Building on main street.

WINNER

At one of our Elder Distribution, we offered a door prize and here is a picture of the winner. Congratulations Margaret Olson, happy grilling!

Boathouse Workshop

Located in the Prince William Marina, lockers C7 and C8 are a workshop space for NVE members to work on wood projects. The Elder Program and the Ilanka Cultural Center joined together funding to provide this space to hold Cultural classes or a space Elders can share their wood working knowledge. It's heated and has tools to get you started on that special project.

If you are interested in teaching a class or need a space to complete a project, contact Danaya at ICC or Jackie with the Elder Program to schedule to use the Boathouse workshop. Come check it out July 21, Wednesday from 2-4 p.m. ■

The Eyak People, DaXunhyuu

Giyah Traditional and Contemporary Subsistence Patterns

BY RAVEN CUNNINGHAM

Native Village of Eyak Tribal Council member

Traditionally, clans owned the salmon streams, halibut banks, berry patches, intertidal regions, egg harvesting areas, and land for hunting. As long as the area was used by the clan, they had ownership and rights to the area. Food harvest was seasonal and therefore had to be preserved for the winter months until the following early spring. Their food was preserved by being smoked in a smokehouse or dried by wind or sun.

The Eyak adapted some subsistence customs from their Alutiiq/Sugpiaq/Chugach Region neighbors to the West, and others from their Eastern neighbors, the Tlingit. Oceans and rivers supplied their main source of food, salmon being the most important.

There are five species that run up the Copper River Delta and Orca Inlet area: te'ya'lee (King or Chinook), AdAte'ya' (Silver or Coho), cha'ch (Red or Sockeye), tiitl' (Chum or Dog salmon), kaashk' (Pink or Humpy). dAG lab (Steelhead trout), waaw (herring), k'uDA'uhdg waaw (herring eggs), and saag (hooligan) were also caught and eaten.

Harvested sea plants included seaweed tiishiyah (broad) and iinLxAwah (red), beach asparagus, and goose tongue. Eyak men fished for LAGtiiX (halibut) with hook and line from AXAih (dugout canoes), dug jiidaadAG (clams) from the beaches, and hunted geeLtaag (seal) and sahs (sea otter) with spears by sneaking up on them when they are resting on the beach, rocks, or ice.

In the spring and summer, the Eyak collected shoots, plants and la'mahd (berries). In the fall they hunted GAnuh (ducks), naaXAg (geese), and GAX-tl' (swan), while k'uLdiyaann (grouse), and dlaaq'Aya' (mountain goat) were hunted year around. XAwaa (dogs) aided in hunting for lixah (brown bear) and ts'iyub (black bear). k'uXaashg (beaver), XaangAdiinyanh (porcupine), k'ujAX-Ayaash (marten), k'uLA'ah (muskrat), and dALAXeeg (marmot) were taken with deadfalls and snares. Today, these subsistence patterns are still a crucial part of the Native people's cultural identity. ■

The Copper River Family of Companies Quarterly Update

A Letter from Sylvia Lange, ANGS Chairman

Hello Fellow Tribal Members,

You are a Tribal Owner of ANGS. ANGS manages and oversees, on behalf our Tribe, the Copper River Family of Companies. Your NVE Council understands our ownership of this "Family of Companies" as a vital means to further the vision and mission of our Tribe. The Native Village of Eyak has been a proud participant in the Small Business Administration 8(a) program since 2006. We have been building upon that experience, and I'm happy to report that our Copper River Family of Companies have had their best year in history (even through the pandemic) and continues on an upward trajectory that has led us into another record breaking year. Since October 2020, I have served as Chairman of ANGS. 2020 was a year of restructuring at ANGS, welcoming a new CEO, Kevin McLaughlin, and many other changes including new board members, and implementing new policies and procedures. We are now reaping the benefits of that process, and we continue increased oversight, transparency, and communication. This success is due to many factors, not the least of which is the contributions of the prior ANGS Board and we thank them for their long years of service.

The ANGS Board maintains a regular calendar of meetings, both monthly and quarterly, as well as two standing committees, finance and governance, that report to the full board. The ANGS board meets with CEO Kevin McLaughlin, along with his entire executive team. Our CEO provides detailed and thorough reports to the entire ANGS Board in our monthly meetings. In addition, Ed Mangini

(our CFO) provides detailed financial reports of all the companies, and presents those reports to the ANGS Board, including more in-depth presentations to our finance committee quarterly. We feel our working relationship with our CEO and his management team, provides sound and proper oversight over our companies. As part of our new initiative regarding increased transparency, we will give a brief overview of our companies and will include a highlight of one of our programs. I hope to include a report in each Eyak Echo going forward, focusing on a different company each time, and am happy to answer any questions you may have about your companies.

Gunalch'eech,
Sylvia Lange
(Tlingit/Sugpiaq)

Graveyard shift

After virus delays, volunteers return to cemetery cleanup

68 bags of grass removed from Pioneer Cemetery

BY ZACHARY SNOWDON SMITH

In 2020, the annual Bill Hansen Jr. Pioneer Cemetery Cleanup was canceled for the first time in its then 10-year history. This June, with coronavirus restrictions lifted, volunteers returned to Cordova's Pioneer Cemetery to clean up two years' worth of plant growth.

About 30 volunteers participated in the June 22 cleanup, including current and former Eyak Corporation board members, staff and shareholders; Native Village of Eyak staff and tribal members; and assorted other local volunteers. Visitors participating in the event included Jeff Stutzke, a hydraulics engineer for the Alaska Department of Transportation and Public Facilities.

Volunteers operating four weed trimmers took about two hours to clear the cemetery, said Eyak Corporation Cordova Lands and Office Manager Tiffany Beedle, who coordinated the cleanup. Eyak Corporation Vice President Brennan Cain was among the volunteers who helped rake and bag enough cut grass to fill 68 bags. Volunteers also chipped paint from wooden grave markers, although the threat of rain prevented immediate repainting. Repainting will take place during calmer weather, Beedle said.

The event is named after Bill Hansen Jr., an Eyak Corporation shareholder and NVE tribal member who advocated for cemetery maintenance. The event is a joint venture between the Eyak Corporation, NVE and the city, which loaned weed trimmers, rakes and other equipment to the project. For volunteers, the event was capped off by a barbecue provided by NVE. ■
